Prince Claus of the Netherlands (1926 - 2002)

Prins Claus, naamgever van de leerstoel

Prince Claus, the inspiration for the Chair

Prins Claus voelde zich sterk verbonden met het streven naar rechtvaardigheid in de Noord-Zuid verhoudingen. Zijn werk, zijn reizen, en zijn persoonlijke contacten gaven hem een scherp inzicht in de mogelijkheden van en vooral ook de belemmeringen daarvoor. Hij was een onvermoeibare pleiter voor evenwichtige verhoudingen in de wereld, en bracht mensen bij elkaar om belemmeringen op te heffen en om kansen te verzilveren. Zijn kennis van zaken, zijn toegankelijkheid en zijn persoonlijkheid waren hierbij zeer behulpzaam. Hij was en is hierdoor een inspiratiebron voor velen.

Prins Claus ontving in 1988 een Honorary Fellowship van het Institute of Social Studies (ISS) 'in recognition of his continued insistence on the importance of reducing the differences between the rich and the poor in national and international fora, while emphasising the human dimension of this process and not only that of international policy and strategy'. Tijdens de officiële ceremonie sprak hij een dankwoord uit in de vorm van 23 stellingen over 'development and equity'. Deze stellingen zijn in dit jaarverslag integraal afgedrukt.

Met de instelling van de Prins Claus Leerstoel geeft de academische gemeenschap van de Universiteit Utrecht en het Institute of Social Studies blijk van haar grote respect en waardering voor de persoon van Prins Claus, zijn werk, en zijn inzet voor en gezag op het terrein van een evenwichtige ontwikkeling in de wereld. De Universiteit Utrecht en het Institute of Social Studies zijn vereerd dat Koningin Beatrix toestemming heeft verleend de naam van Prins Claus aan deze leerstoel te verbinden.

Prins Claus der Nederlanden werd in 1926 als Claus von Amsberg geboren in Dötzingen (Hitzacker), Nedersaksen. Hij studeerde aan de Universiteit van Hamburg bij de faculteit der Rechten en Staatswetenschappen (1948–1956), waarna hij werkzaam was op de Duitse ambassade in de Dominicaanse Republiek en als Chargé d'Affaires in Ivoorkust. Van 1963 tot 1965 werkte hij bij het ministerie van Buitenlandse Zaken in Bonn bij de sectie Economische Betrekkingen met Afrika.

Prince Claus was strongly committed to development and equity in North-South relations. Through his work, his travels and his personal contacts, he gained a deep understanding of the opportunities for and particularly the obstacles to this type of development. He was indefatigable in his work of development and equity throughout the world, bringing people together to solve problems and make the most of opportunities. His knowledge, his accessibility and his personality all made an important contribution to his work. As a result, he was – and remains – a source of inspiration to many.

In 1988, Prince Claus received an Honorary Fellowship from the Institute of Social Studies (ISS) 'in recognition of his continued insistence on the importance of reducing the differences between the rich and the poor in national and international fora, while emphasising the human dimension of this process and not only that of international policy and strategy.' At the official ceremony for the Fellowship, Prince Claus gave an acceptance speech stating his views on development and equity in the form of 23 propositions, included in full in this report.

The establishment of the Prince Claus Chair attests to the deep respect and appreciation of the academic community of Utrecht University and the ISS for Prince Claus as a person, for his work, and for his commitment to and authority in the field of development and equity throughout the world. Both Utrecht University and the ISS are honoured that Queen Beatrix has agreed to naming the Chair after the Prince.

Prince Claus was born Claus von Amsberg in 1926, in Dötzingen (Hitzacker), Nedersaksen. He studied at the University of Hamburg, in the Faculty of Law and Political Science (1948–1956), after which he worked at the German embassy to the Dominican Republic and as Chargé d'Affaires to the Republic of the Ivory Coast. From 1963 to 1965, he worked at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Bonn, in the Department of African Economic Relations.

Na zijn huwelijk in 1966 met Prinses Beatrix, ging zijn bijzondere aandacht uit naar ontwikkelings-samenwerking. De Prins werd onder meer benoemd tot lid van de Nationale Adviesraad voor Ontwikkelingssamenwerking, tot lid van het Bureau van deze Raad, tot voorzitter van de Nationale Commissie voor de Ontwikkelingsstrategie 1970-1980 en tot Bijzonder Adviseur van de minister voor Ontwikkelingssamenwerking. In 1984 werd hij tevens inspecteur-generaal Ontwikkelingssamenwerking. Ter gelegenheid van de zeventigste verjaardag van Prins Claus heeft de Nederlandse regering het initiatief genomen tot de oprichting van het Prins Claus Fonds voor Cultuur en Ontwikkeling. Doel van het Fonds is het vergroten van het inzicht in cultuur en ontwikkeling. Prins Claus was erevoorzitter van het Fonds.

After his marriage to Princess Beatrix in 1966, Prince Claus focused his efforts on development cooperation. He was appointed member of the National Advisory Council for Development Cooperation (Nationale Adviesraad voor Ontwikkelingssamenwerking, NAR), member of the Office of this Commission, Chair of the National Committee for Development Strategy (Nationale Commissie voor de Ontwikkelingsstrategie), a position he held from 1970 to 1980, and Special Advisor to the Minister of Development Cooperation. In 1984, he was appointed Inspector General of Development Cooperation. To commemorate the Prince's seventieth birthday, the Dutch government established the Prince Claus Fund for Culture and Development (Prins Claus Fonds voor Cultuur en Ontwikkeling), of which Prince Claus was Honorary Chair. The objective of the Fund is to increase cultural awareness and promote development.

Excerpt of the Prince's acceptance speech upon receiving an Honorary Fellowship, Institute of Social Studies, 1988

1. The object of 'development cooperation' is to help the recipient countries to achieve greater independence, in particular economic independence, in the light of the realisation that the achievement of political independence alone means very little. In reality though, the result of development cooperation in most cases is merely to confirm or even reinforce a state of dependence. One might dub this as 'neo-colonialism with the best of intentions'.
2. While money is important as a means of promoting the economic development process, development is essentially a cultural process. It is not a question of material goods but of human resources. In fact it is impossible to 'develop' another person or country from outside; people develop themselves, and so do countries. All that we can do is assist that process if asked to do so and then in a particular context or socio-cultural environment.
3. An awareness of one's own cultural identity and past is a fundamental condition for sustainable autonomous development. Where support is sought for cultural projects, the development of visual arts, literature, music, dance etc., donor organisations should respond whole-heartedly.
4. A rich country which sees itself as playing a pioneering role in development cooperation should untie its aid. This will increase both the efficiency of aid and the autonomy of decision-making in the recipient country, enabling it to purchase goods – and indeed expertise – from the supplier offering the most favourable terms.
5. It is not so much a question of how much money you spend on development cooperation but how you spend it. A smaller amount may be made to count for more. I would advocate a system of evaluating aid in gross and net terms. This would mean deducting from the gross aid flow all of the failures, adverse effects (for example in the ecological sphere) and the costs of tied aid – to name just a few – to arrive at a more relevant figure for the genuinely effective, or net, flow of aid.
6. We talk a lot about relevance in the context of 'development cooperation', but we still all too often confuse our own interests with those of developing countries.
7. When we enter into cooperation, our principle must be that we do not interfere in matters where the recipient country is capable of taking action itself. So if a country possesses adequate manpower we should draw on it and not try to appoint our own national experts. Even if we think our experts are more expert we should still recruit and finance more local manpower and expertise. It is better to have a project that is technically only 80% successful but completely integrated in the local environment and thus sustainable than one that scores 100% in technical terms but which one knows for certain will not be sustainable once our own experts withdraw.
8. In development cooperation, as in many other fields, output is more important than input. We are still far too fixated on input. Sustainability in sociological, economic and ecological terms should be the paramount criterion of success.
9. Donor governments should leave aid projects aimed directly at specific – mostly underprivileged – target groups to non-governmental organisations (NGOs) both in developing and industrialised countries.
10. Developing countries should have a greater say in the way development funds are spent, including the way they are divided between project aid and balance of payments support. If a country so wishes it should be possible to transfer all of the available funds in the form of balance of payments support – untied.

11. Certain LLDCs are currently only able to absorb emergency aid, such as food aid, and import assistance and should not be saddled with project aid against their will.
12. Protectionism in the rich countries does more harm than good which development aid even under most favourable conditions can do.
13. Agricultural policy in the rich countries must take account of the justified interests of the developing countries. Dumping of agricultural produce (such as grain, sugar and meat) on the world market has disastrous social and economic consequences for many countries and undermines their position in world trade. Dumping and protectionism are in fact twin evils.
14. The provision of development funds is no more than a minor attempt to offset the losses which many commodity-exporting developing countries are suffering as a result of the continuing fall of commodity prices. Their terms of trade are still deteriorating. Their loss is our gain. I therefore regard development aid not as a favour but as a universal social duty.
15. An international macroeconomic policy aimed at improving the terms of trade of developing countries would be more valuable than any amount of development aid.
16. The processing of commodities – for example coffee and cocoa – must not be penalised by protectionist measures which hit imports. The anti-processing clauses must be replaced by a policy encouraging processing of raw materials or commodities in the countries of origin.
17. The Multi-Fibre Agreement should be abolished and replaced by complete freedom of imports. At the same time we should differentiate more between the various types of developing countries: NICs should be treated differently from LDCs. NICs should be brought under the GATT regulations.
18. The debt problem is a complex one. Far too many people who know nothing or too little about the subject are voicing opinions. I shall not therefore venture any comment other than this: I do believe that the LLDCs at least should have their official debts cancelled. This is purely a matter of common sense. We should never have burdened them with loans to pay back in the first place.
19. The suggestion of a Marshall Plan for the Third World is unrealistic and misguiding. The situation in which Europe found itself at the end of the last World War cannot be compared with the very diverse circumstances of the developing countries today. A suggestion of this sort serves to raise expectations which can only lead to disappointment, frustration and disruption.
20. We must be prepared to lend vigorous support to regional South/South cooperation which would include generating trade flows (for example regional food supplies) and technical cooperation, with a view to untying all development aid from the North.
21. Much of the human suffering in developing countries cannot be attributed to global power structures, natural disasters, multinational companies, the World Bank, the IMF or other exogenous evil doers and easy scapegoats.
22. Development in the true sense of the word is impossible without some form of democracy which gives the people some say in the process. It is a question of enabling people to direct their energies within their own cultural context to bring about change, in the belief that this is in their own interests. I am not using democracy here in the formal western sense but in its more basic meaning of 'by the people for the people'.
23. Freedom of speech is an essential element in any form of democracy and therefore a prerequisite for true development. The power elite, wherever they may be in the world, cannot be trusted if their country knows no freedom of speech. It is a fact of human life and also essential for the protection of those in power who are worthy of trust.

Inaugural lecture of the second holder of the Chair, Professor Amina Mama, Institute of Social Studies, 28 April 2004

Critical Capacities: Facing the Challenges of Intellectual Development in Africa

Professor Mama's inaugural lecture presents a critical analysis of the challenges that have inspired and constrained African intellectual development in the changing post-colonial context of the 20th and 21st centuries. African intellectual identities have been hard to articulate and institutionalise within formal educational institutions reluctant to move beyond the universalising premises of the scholarly paradigms developed in post-industrial capitalist contexts. These include certain globally hegemonic organisations of power and knowledge – intellectual regimes that have constrained the emergence of African-focused intellectual culture within the formal structures of African universities, and that are currently being propagated through the globalisation of higher education policy in a manner insensitive to the meaning and impact of higher-education reform in African contexts.

African intellectuals have responded to the situation in a variety of creative ways, both within and outside African universities, in a manner that offers useful insights and strategies for the future. The present scenario underscores the need to establish strong, creative and intellectually productive institutions that are equipped to address continental knowledge needs in a manner grounded in the political and cultural aspirations of Africa's diverse societies. This requires African intellectuals responsive to the challenges of democratisation, gender equality and social justice.

Algemeen

De Prins Claus leerstoel roteert jaarlijks tussen de Universiteit Utrecht en het ISS. De leerstoelhouder wordt benoemd voor één academisch jaar en resideert voor een periode van drie maanden bij de benoemende instelling, in beginsel in april, mei en juni. Voorafgaand aan de selectie en de benoeming, kiest het Curatorium de thema's of onderwerpen die in het desbetreffende jaar centraal staan. Het Curatorium doet suggesties voor potentiële kandidaten aan de benoemende instelling. De rector van de instelling stelt een zoekcommissie in. Deze commissie draagt twee of meer kandidaten vertrouwelijk voor aan het Curatorium. Het Curatorium doet een enkelvoudige voordracht, waarna de Universiteit Utrecht of het ISS de leerstoelhouder benoemt.

Criteria

Het Curatorium past de volgende criteria toe voor het selecteren en benoemen van de kandidaten:

1. Reinforcing the objective of the Prince Claus Chair

The Curatorium must:

- * Keep alive the thoughts of Prince Claus on culture and development by selecting themes and/or issues which are relevant to research and teaching at Utrecht University and/or the ISS;
- * Select themes/issues that are up to date (e.g., international relations, sociology, economics, human rights, conflict and peace, governance, culture and religion, sustainable development);
- * Ensure sufficient variation in themes/issues in subsequent years;
- * Nominate candidates from different regions (Asia, Africa, Latin America, the Caribbean or the Pacific) and ensure sufficient variation in the gender and regional background of the candidates in subsequent years.

2. Outreach programme

The nomination must take into account:

- * The candidate's possibilities to attract students and to facilitate academic cooperation;
- * The possibilities of an outreach programme within the academic community of Utrecht University, the ISS and the Netherlands;
- * The possibilities of an outreach programme for the general public in the Netherlands.

3. The candidate

Candidates for nomination must:

- * Have expertise in one or more aspects of development, have affinity with the subject of culture and development, and be inspiring for colleagues, students and the general public;
- * Have a strong academic profile and an active role in civil life;
- * As a rule, be younger than 45 years of age;
- * Take a multidisciplinary approach;
- * Be willing and able to contribute to an outreach programme;
- * Work in or originate from Africa, Asia, Latin America, the Caribbean or the Pacific;
- * Be fluent in the English language;
- * Add new contacts to the existing networks of Utrecht University and the ISS.

General

The Prince Claus Chair alternates annually between Utrecht University and the ISS. Holders are appointed for one academic year and reside at the institute in question for three months, in principle in April, May and June. Prior to the selection and appointment of the candidate, the Curatorium identifies the main themes or topics for the period in question. The Curatorium then suggests potential candidates to the appropriate institute, and the rector appoints a selection committee. This committee confidentially proposes two or more candidates to the Curatorium, which then nominates one candidate to be appointed to the Chair by the institute.

Criteria

The Curatorium has decided to apply the following criteria in the search for and the nomination of the candidates:
